Scoutmaster's Corner

By Mr. Neimon, Scoutmaster

Want to be an Eagle Scout?

Here is the secret: Have a plan and execute it. I know, I know - that sounds lame and not very exciting. But think about it, have you ever done anything in life that matters without having some kind of plan and then executing it?

Ok, okay, here are some details for your plan:

1. MOST IMPORTANT: Do a question a day from any merit badge or rank requirements you are working on - 5 to 10 minutes tops. Everyone has.
2. If you find a merit badge that you have to track an activity for a period of time, find another one and do two at the same time (i.e. Family Life, Personal Fitness).
3. Have at least two merit badges you're working on at a time, one of which should be an Eagle required one.
4. Ask your parents to help you by reminding you and giving you a push.
5. Lastly, don't push off the work, time is not your friend and it just gives you stress. Most Eagles will tell you after that fact that they could have and should have done it sooner.

Now, it is not a race but if you follow the above plan, you can get to the rank of Eagle in an appropriate length of time and without a lot of stress. Our troop needs eagles to be there to help inspire the younger scouts.

Preparing for the Coon Feed ~ by Brandon Tobias

At the coon feed de-fatting we cut off the fat from the raccoons. While there, we talked with people and had a good time. We de-fatted around 90 raccoons that were split into 4 parts each making a total of around 360 pieces of coon. It only took us around 2 hours to do all of the coons, but by the time we were done our arms were a little sore. Over all we had a fun time and I would do it again next time.

hours, Neimon helps organize conferences held every year in Wisconsin on court safety and security.

“The conference is better each year in part due to Mike’s hard work,” Bohren wrote in his nomination.

When not doing things related to his job outside work hours, Neimon is at no loss for ways to stay busy. The Wauwatosa native is the Scoutmaster for Boy Scout Troop 49 in Oconomowoc and is the father of two Eagle Scouts.

He serves as the president of the Meadows of Delafield Homeowners Association and prides himself on his conservation work with that group. He also coaches high school students at the Kettle Moraine Curling Club. And, last but not least, he has a black belt in karate and helps teach students at a local martial-arts academy.

Although Neimon said he doesn’t go out of his way to be publicly honored, he is happy to receive an Unsung Heroes award. He views it not so much as a recognition of his own particular accomplishments, but rather of the essential yet behind-the-scenes work that hundreds of people perform every day to keep the judicial system running smoothly.

“My colleagues and I, we work together to solve problems and simply do the work we are entrusted to do,” Neimon said. “So that’s what’s good for me about this – to have it acknowledged that that’s where all the solutions come from, when we work together as a team.” ~Dan Shaw – Wisconsin Law Journal

Neimon takes pride in helping hold court system together

Michael Neimon sees the court system as the glue that holds society together.

Many of his colleagues no doubt think the court system itself would have a few more loose ends were it not for the work of the District 3 court administrator. Broadly speaking, Neimon's main responsibility is to provide administrative support to the chief judge for the Third District, Jennifer Dorow, as well as for circuit-court judges and staff within the district. In practice, the job has him doing everything from helping courts manage their caseloads to overseeing security and construction projects at courthouses.

Neimon may spend a lot of time working with circuit courts in the Third District, which encompasses Jefferson, Ozaukee, Washington and Waukesha counties. But he is technically an employee of the state Supreme Court.

As such, part of his time is spent making sure lower courts are following procedures and rules set by the high court. Neimon said he seldom if ever finds himself having to push someone to come into compliance.

"I mostly try to be a colleague and provide technical and professional expertise in areas that they might not have," he said. "Luckily for me, I have the best clerks of court in the state of Wisconsin. So they make my job a whole lot easier."

In nominating Neimon for an Unsung Hero award, Waukesha County Judge Michael Bohren noted that Neimon sits on the state court's Planning and Policy Advisory Committee's court security subcommittee. Outside of work
